LATE BANKER IS PAID HIGH TRIBUTE

Rev. Henry L. Davis Lauds Life of Myron Campbell in Memorial Services.

Special memorial services were held at the First Methodist church Sunday morning for Myron Campbell and the session was marked by a large attendance. The pastor, Rev. Henry L. Davis, spoke on John 3-2, this text being applicable to Mr. Campbell, he said as the text gives two sources of comfort for the lives of all good people that die.

"Now we are all the sons of God," said Mr. Davis, "and there are four senses in which Mr. Campbell's character indicated his sonship with God."

His Four Characteristics.

—The Divine is creative. One mark of divinity in human life is the power to create. It is the ability to originate. Mr. Campbell was original. He followed no beaten path; his mind was a creative mind, whether in the banking, literary or social world.

2—The Divine is self-sacrificing. Mr. Campbell was self-sacrificing. He was ever carrying the burdens of others. He would still be alive had he consented to lighten his burden. He carried the burden of his business, of the Y. M. C. A., of his church, thus proving himself to be Christ-like in his life.

3—Another divine mark is devotion to duty. "I must work the works of Him that sent me," Mr. Campbell's devotion to duty was proverbial. With him duty was always first. To show him that a thing ought to be done and he was ready to do it. There are few citizens who have given himself with more unselfish devotion to business, to civic affairs and to the cause of religion than Mr. Campbell.

4—Finally the greatest mark of Divinity is goodness. Mr. Campbell was the soul of goodness. He had but one standard of righteousness in every department of his life. The principal of good passed like a ray of light through his home, business, civic and church life.

Comfort in Future Life.

"But the comfort of the passing away of a man like Mr. Campbell is not in the life that he lived only," declared Mr. Davis, "for if in this life only we have hope we are of all men most miserable. The Christian faith looks toward the world that is to come. John says in the text that there is a future life; that it is the first of all of uncertainty. 'It doth not yet appear what we shall be.' It is future as to time and we cannot know the future; it is a higher state of being and we cannot comprehend it, but there are things that we do know of the future life. We shall be like Him in goodness and perfection; we shall have a perfect vision; we shall see Him as He is."

"So our comfort is that we have a life like Mr. Campbell's as an inspiration here and we look forward to the world to come when 'Those angel faces smile which we have loved long since and lost a while.'"

COVERING NATION IN SAXON WORKING FOR SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN

Circling the United States in a small Saxon motor car working in the cause of woman suffrage, Alice Sautter Burke and Neil Richardson of New York, passed in South Bend over night one day this week, and then continued their trip on east. Thus far they have covered approximately 9,000 miles and before their journey ends they will have gone about 15,000 miles.

The young women are making the auto trip through 25 states under the direction and as members of the National Suffrage association, making vigorous speeches and appeals to large audiences in every city where they have stopped. They were granted the free use of a Saxon car by the Saxon Co. to enable the manufacturers to demonstrate the road endurance contained in one of these small automobiles.

The Saxon car was quartered at the Franklin Motor Car Co., on E. Main av., while in this city. The Saxon Co. is also agents for the

MOOSE IN PICNIC

500 Attend Annual Outing at Melber's Grove.

Five hundred people were present at the annual picnic of the local Loyal Order of Moose, that was held yesterday afternoon at Melber's grove, five miles west of the city.

The feature of the event was the music that was furnished by the Red Men's band of this city. Dancing, various contests, and other amusements made up the afternoon's program. The picnicers left at noon and returned early in the evening.

PROGRESS BEING MADE ON HIGHWAY

It Now Looks Like Work Will Be Finished This Fall.

About twice as much work was done on the Lincoln highway this week as last and it now looks that the two and three fourths mile strip of the thoroughfare west of the city which remains to be completed will be done before bad weather sets in.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce committee which was appointed by the county commissioners and representatives of the Chamber early last week, report that about 350 feet of the road was built on Friday and 200 on Saturday and they state the progress which the contractors are now making is very satisfactory. By pushing the work on the road every day in the week it is now thought that the highway can be finished before cold weather sets in.

A strip of about half a mile near the railroad crossing close to New Carlisle and about two miles just outside the city is all of the highway that is not finished. Early this week most of the strip near New Carlisle will be built and only a very short section at the railroad crossing will necessarily be left undone.

The Chamber of Commerce intends to keep an almost daily tab on the work done and will make every effort to see that the highway is completed this fall.

CITY BETTER THAN COUNTRY

Rev. G. W. Allison Defends City, But Says Its Problems Yet Unsolved.

The sermon at Hope Presbyterian chapel yesterday morning was upon the theme, "The Redemption of the City," and was a study of the spiritual condition of the modern city. The minister, George William Allison, in speaking on this theme said among other things:

"While there is no social fact so striking as the rapidity with which modern cities have grown, we cannot go back beyond the time when there were cities. Archaeologists have unearthed cities which had performed their deeds and died long before the dawn of any written records which we now possess. There are cities in Peru whose story will never be known. The ancient cities of the valleys of the Nile and Tigris and Euphrates rivers are very meagerly known."

"The city was originally formed in the ancient days chiefly for the purpose of preparedness and protection just ourselves to its conditions; we have but faced its problems, not solved them. And the supreme test of Christianity will be its ability to mould the life of the sordid, materialistic, energetic city of today into the 'new Jerusalem,' not with gold and silver, but with civic justice and righteousness. The city as it is today is the battleground of the forces of human life in the moral and spiritual world. It is a mixed rolled turbid stream. Can it be clarified? In most cases the city may be said to present the same forces which were represented on a four corners of Toronto—a church, a school, a legislative hall and a saloon. These were strangely referred to as dispensation, education, legislation, salvation, and damnation. Every force in human life, morally and spiritually speaking, can be found in the average city and usually in intensified form. But with all of its vices, and I believe contrary to popular supposition, the average life in the city is morally better than that of the rural districts. The city is progressive and better governed and cared for materially and spiritually than the country. The city with its modern sanitation is healthier than the country, also. On the material side American cities need to be ashamed out of their offensive ugliness of appearance, they are shamelessly ugly and shameless about it."

"But after all, the city's value and rank is not to be determined by the size of its population, the amount of its bank clearings, the beauty of its streets and public and private buildings; it is rather to be determined by its contribution to the comfort and virtue of its citizens! And here is where I wish to strike home with the emphatic fact that the church is a necessity in properly attaining the highest object of the city's existence. 'There are many who feel that Christianity is applicable to the small community; but that it will not work in the great mass-centers of today. They forget that it was in its origin born in the cities of Palestine. Jesus Christ so constantly lived in the crowd, that when He went alone it was so unusual that it made good news for the reporters of his day! It was the multitude that moved Him to compassion! It was the wickedness of the city over which He wept. His was a social gospel, not a hermit's dreamings. And the great ideal for the world for which He gave His life, is a civic ideal. Paul went to the cities to spread the influence of Christianity—strategist that he was. And the final dream of the New Testament is that picture of a redeemed world in the purified city of the 'new Jerusalem.' Christianity is perfectly at home in the complex life of modern cities. The church is alive to the problems which the cities present. This is a call to every Christian to bend his energies in the direction of attaining civic as well as personal righteousness. Conquer the city for Christ."

SERVICE FOR GOD SHOULD BE FIRST

Rev. Charles A. Decker Points Out That Church Demands Part of Man's Time.

"A great cause is necessary to a great devotion and a great service," declared Rev. Charles A. Decker in his Sunday morning sermon, the subject of which was, "The Maxim for the Master." In part Mr. Decker said:

"Along every line of activity people are settling down to the work of the winter. Vacations are over and the work of the year waits. There are many claims on our time and strength. Business must receive a large share of our attention. Some will be engaged with the work of the schools. Society will claim its share of our time and strength. And there are all important and necessary lines of activity."

"But Christ and the church also put in a claim on our interest. There is nothing higher in life than the call to invest it completely for the Master. Everything should be appraised in the light of Christ's demands. The standard for all other work should be our work for him. There are positions of honor along other lines of endeavor, but there is nothing that promises such a perpetual and satisfactory reward as work in the Kingdom of God. This service is to be commended to young people who are deciding on their life work."

Calls for Best Efforts.

"The work of the Master calls for the best efforts. A great cause is necessary to a great devotion and a great service. One can't be devoted to anything that is petty or transitory. It is only a great truth that can kindle the heart to sacrifice. Consider Garrison and Lincoln and Francis Willard as illustrations of this. We are governed by our supreme interests. Man may be the master of himself in that he can choose the objects of his allegiance, but when they are chosen he must yield to their leadership. Note how a scientist works for 16 and 18 hours a day in the pursuit of the truth. His interest in a worth while object urges him on. So our devotion to Christ and his cause will be determined by the estimate we put on its value. The indifferent people in the church today are so because of their indifference in the truth which the church represents. Their carelessness is deeper than simply a disregard for an institution. It goes back to fundamental ideals."

Joy in Service.

"It should be said that there is joy in such service as this. It is a false impression that the Christian life is a melancholy one. It is melancholy only to those who have accepted it half-heartedly. There are no pessimists among those who serve supremely. It is easy to despair of a cause if the critic sits in an arm chair at home. And such have concluded that the world is on its way to rapid destruction. But there is no such feeling among those who are on the firing line. The worker in the slums sees first-hand the possibilities of human nature, and the missionary in the heart of darkest Africa believes in the ultimate triumph of the gospel of love. These are the happiest Christians. It is because their lives have been touched by a mighty spirit and their souls fired with a burning passion. These get joy out of their work because it is joy to work for such a cause."

SILENT INFLUENCE OF HOLY SPIRIT IS NEEDED

Rev. Frank Dougherty Says External Demonstrations Useless Without Spiritual Revival.

"The church needs more of the silent influence of the Holy Spirit than it does anything else. Material help and external demonstrations are good in their place but they are valueless without the 'Still Small Voice' within, declared Rev. Frank E. Dougherty, pastor of the Grace M. E. church last night in the sermon on the 'Still Small Voice.' Rev. Dougherty told the story of how the 'Still Small Voice' spoke to Elijah when he was beset by troubles and afflictions and despairing on account of the stubborn waywardness of the Jews who in spite of all that God had done for them persistently went astray. In this state of affairs it was only the 'Still Small Voice' that kept Elijah from being discouraged. Rev. Dougherty then drew a parallel between the state of Elijah and many a man of the present time and said that 'not in the wind, or the earthquake, or the fire, but in the 'Still Small Voice' would men find enlightenment and guidance."

PRODIGAL SON STORY SADDEST

Dr. James L. Gardiner Calls It Most Pathetic Tale of Bible.

Dr. James L. Gardiner last night spoke to a large audience in St. Paul's Memorial Methodist Episcopal church on the subject of the "Prodigal Son." The choir sang "The Ninety and Nine" and "Just Over the Line." Three motion pictures were presented, "The Prodigal Son," "The Price of Human Living" and "The Making of an American." Dr. Gardiner in part said: "My text this evening is taken from the 15th chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke, one of the most remarkable chapters in the whole bible. In this chapter we have the record of three parables uttered by our Lord."

"In the first we have the story of a lost sheep; in the second of a lost coin and in the third of a lost boy. In the first there is one lost out of 100 and in the second one out of 10 and in the third one out of two. These parables were delivered by Christ no doubt with cumulative effect. One in 100—that is a sad loss."

FINDS BALL GAME MUCH AS CHURCH

Rev. W. H. Freshley Declares Both Have Many Elements in Common.

Likening the church to a base ball game was the unique method chosen by Rev. W. H. Freshley of the First Evangelical church in giving his Sunday morning sermon, choosing as a subject "Some Lessons the Church Can Learn from Baseball." "No observing person will doubt that there is something fascinating about a ball game," said Mr. Freshley, "And what are the elements in the game that cause this attraction and fascination?" He then asked if these elements could not be applied to the church, the Sunday school, and the young people's work so as to make them more interesting. According to Mr. Freshley there are six dominating elements in a ball game, that are the attracting power, namely: preparation, competition, sacrifice, skill, opportunity, and "pep." All of these elements of the game are found in the church as well as in a ball game," said he taking up each element in connection with the church.

"Preparation," said Mr. Freshley, "is as necessary to the church, in every department, as is the preparing of a baseball team. How often have we seen the church fail for lack of preparation," he added. In regard to competition, the speaker declared that the church
